Mini Communication #2

FEB 26 1972

To the Auxiliants Butts,Dust,Hall

Important intelligence lately has been received from Rebecca and Wanda and also a telephonic communication from Janet,who,like the Master,who undoubtedly was a violin virtuoso,and a frequenter of Covent Garden, is well informed as to the music of the spheres,or spheres of music. Rebecca inquires as to how,where and when The Nemesis of Crime had his left canine beligerently removed. This was recalled to him when,in the Case of the Empty House,he is examining his "M" file (which includes no Marshalls) he notes the name of the Fisticuffer one Matthews,who,in an unrecorded case,threw a left cross at the Founder of the Art of Detection,detaching it,at Charing Cross,from the latter's gums. In response to Wanda,which may also be a question to her sister Auxiliants,it is unnecessary to return the Mini Communications. As to the official ones in that category,We have heard nothing from Irregulars Gunning, Horton and Reesor. The latter may be piloting in the nether blue;the first mentioned extra busy with his educational duties at the Arcadia House of Correction. Mr.Horton has not surfaced. Although communicated with following his notice in the Journal he did not respond. Considering it is not Regular to be Irregular,or v.v., we shall not worry whether the Official Epistle goes the rounds or not. Our Mini Communications will be of connective interest. The "Solve A Crime" feature newsp. pieces submitted by Rebecca are indeed thought provoking. They're attached for Wanda to share with Janet. Years ago I proposed a Concordance to the Sacred Writings. This stupendous and vital undertaking was tackled by the noted Sherlockian Jay Finley Christ, who in 1947 produced "An Irregular Guide To...." My copy is pretty well worn.Shall see if still available,and will then share with you all,to use a supposed Southern euphemism. I trust all important points have been covered,though none of them have been prickly.

attach.

Irregularly yours,
L.Marshall
